

Definition of Mandate According to Black's Law Dictionary

Mandate: written command given by an authority to an agent (member of public) / contract by which one person requests another person to agree voluntarily to a service. It only becomes effective when the mandatory agrees. Therefore, a mandate only becomes mandatory upon agreement. Mandate requests without consent bear no obligation. There is a difference between a mandate and law.

Mandate Meaning

Legislation is written using legalese of which attributes different meaning to the words in the English language. When legislation "states" an instruction must be followed, e.g.: wear a mask or social distance, what it really means is "you may wear a mask" or "you may social distance" respectively. Basically, legislation asks for consent. To find out the meaning of words used in legislation look them up in Black's Law Dictionary. Everything in this system is governed using legislation and at its foundation it is consent based, your compliance with legislation is you consenting to it by default.
